The Ultimate Survival Guide for CompanyManagement: Introduction to College CompanyManagement.New adrenomedullin receptor assay reveals predominant localization to the kidney cortex and medulla in rat. We examined the distribution of adrenomedullin (AM) receptors in the rat kidney. A [125I]AM radioimmunoassay was used to measure AM binding in homogenates from renal cortex (CX), medulla (MD), and the remainder of the whole kidney (WB). The binding was concentration dependent, saturable, and reversible. The KD for AM binding in WB and CX was 0.17 +/- 0.02 and 0.13 +/- 0.01 nM, respectively. The Bmax for AM binding in WB and CX was 59.05 +/- 5.2 and 34.7 +/- 2.7 fmol/mg protein, respectively, in WB and 114.9 +/- 18.6 and 27.2 +/- 2.9 fmol/mg protein, respectively, in CX. The KD for AM binding in MD was approximately 5 nM. N-[125I]AM was displaced 50% by 10 nM AM and 100% by 20 nM AM. Diadenosine 5',5''-P1,P4-tetraphosphate (AP4A) displaced 50% of [125I]AM binding in WB but had little effect on binding in CX or MD. The order of potency for displacement of [125I]AM binding was AM > or = adenosine > AP4A. The distribution of AM receptors in rat kidney is distinct from that of adenosine receptors, which are abundant in the MD, but present in lower concentrations in CX. These results suggest that AM interacts with a distinct class of receptor in kidney. Description Every Asteroid has a story – and Ceres has been a talking point since the moment it was discovered! An object as large as a city, Ceres has been changing our perspective on the asteroid belt, and the short story below can't do it justice. Read this for yourself – or read it with a friend – and enjoy the story. It's an excellent way to experience Asteroids.
